Pet diabetes may seem scary – but your four-legged friends Sugar the Cat and Spike the Dog are here to help you. They have 3 top facts about pet diabetes to share with you.

When I was diagnosed, my owner and I did the reading. Pet diabetes is a group of conditions where:

There is too little or no insulin – causing chronically increased blood sugar

Sugar is paw-some! She is the one who told me why increased blood sugar causes the signs of diabetes:

Frequent urination

Increased thirst

Weight loss with or without increased appetite

Now that my diabetes is managed, I have a purr-fectly happy life – and your pet can too. All you need is:

Daily Routine

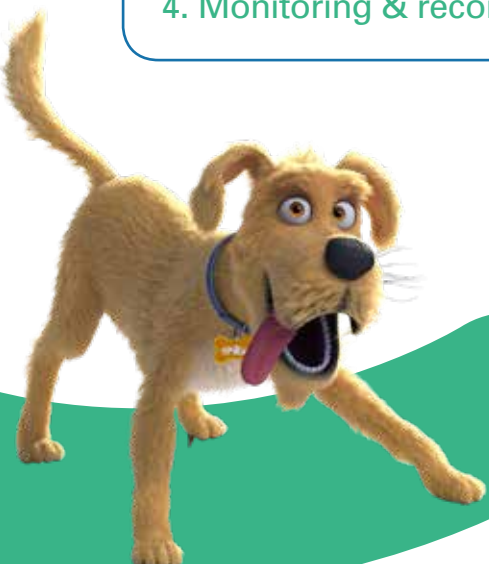

1. Insulin injections
2. Suitable diet & meal times
3. Exercise
4. Monitoring & recording progress

Patience

Most diabetic pets respond rapidly to insulin, but it can take weeks to resolve all of the clinical signs

Hope that helped! And remember, if you think that your pet might be showing any of the above signs, be an awesome owner and contact your vet today to schedule an exam.
